HODGKINSON TO SPEAK AT 1982 AJCCA CONVENTION

DR. HAROLD HODGKINSON, noted author, researcher, and speaker, to deliver Keynote Address in Birmingham.

Members of the Alabama junior/community college are fortunate indeed to have as Keynote Speaker for the AJCCA Convention 1982 Dr. Harold L. (Bud) Hodgkinson, President of the National Training Laboratories, Arlington, Virginia. Dr. Hodgkinson has been listed as one of the top 44 individuals "contributing most to new directions in higher education" by Change magazine.

Dr. Hodgkinson came to the Professional Institute from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare where he had served as Director of the National Institute of Education from 1975 to 1977. In that capacity he administered an agency of 350 staff and an annual budget of 70 million dollars. NIE funded basic and applied research in career education, educational technology, school financing, the upgrading of basic skills, and the upgrading of educational research. Earlier in his career, Hodgkinson had served Simmons College as Dean of the School of Education, Bard College as Dean of the College, and the University of California at Berkeley as Research Director of the Center for Research and Development in Higher Education.

Dr. Hodgkinson has been editor of the Harvard Education Review and was a member of the Editorial Board of the Journal of Higher Education. In addition, he has authored 12 books and has published numerous articles in journals such as Educational Record, Journal of Educational Sociology, Change, The Journal of Higher Education, NASPA Journal, Educational Leadership, and many others.

Alabama Association of Community and Junior College members will be not only informed but also entertained at their convention by one of the most outstanding speakers on educational issues--Harold (Bud) Hodgkinson.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Even though our spring conference is yet five months away, I hope you are making your plans to attend in Birmingham on April 15-16. Your Executive Committee will be spending the next two months arranging commission and interest group sessions for our convention. The financial underpinnings of our association rest squarely on your shoulders. If the commissions and interest groups, and indeed the association itself, are to have adequate funding for conference activities, you must support all by your presence. The commission chairpersons and vice-chairpersons are committed to quality, professional programs at the 1982 conference, but those commitments require funding. The Executive Committee has voted to hold the 1982 registration fee to $20 per person, thus marking the fifth year without an increase in that fee. With your attendance and support, and with small increments of income for exhibitors and dues, AJCCA will be able to underwrite and present an interesting and solid program to its membership in April.

Room reservation cards for both the Medical Center Holiday Inn and the Birmingham Hilton will appear in the next issue of the newsletter. Since much of the planning in Birmingham is contingent upon choice of hotels, I would certainly encourage you to forward your reservation card early. The rates available at each facility will be shown on the reservation card. Activities at the conference will be divided equally between the two hotels, and we hope to arrange the schedule in such a manner that the necessity of traveling between the two during either day will be limited.

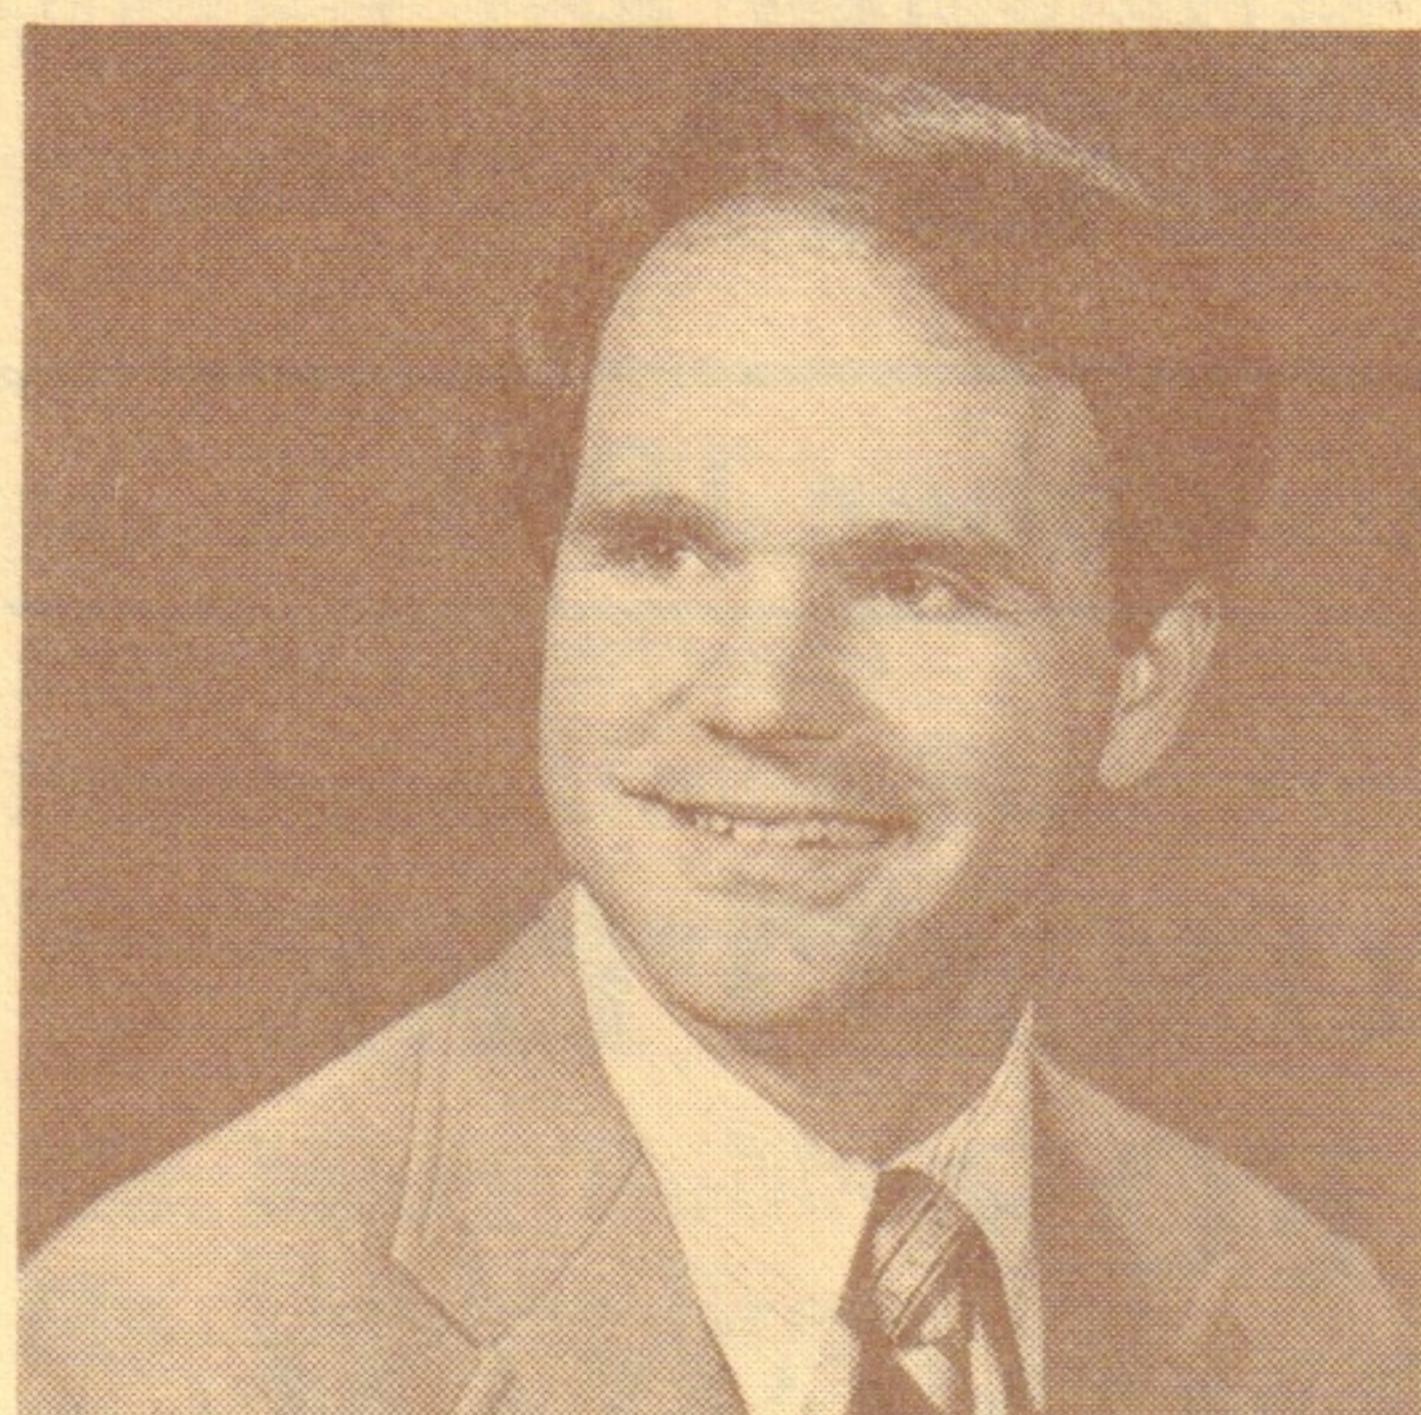

Your Association shortly will print a Fact Sheet concerning our system and its institutions. Copies will be forwarded to an AJCCA representative on each campus and to the President's Office on each campus. We hope that you will use these sheets to carry the message of the public junior and community colleges in Alabama to the people of the state.

FOCUS ON FACULTY

Richard C. Green, art instructor, John C. Calhoun State Community College.

Richard C. Green, art instructor, Calhoun Community College in Decatur, spent the summer of 1981 in Europe as a result of having received a University of Georgia fellowship. Green, who is pursuing his Ph.D. in Art History from The University of Georgia, continued his dissertation research concerning the painting of Antonio Molinari, a Venetian artist who lived from 1655-1704. During the summer of 1981, Green studied at the Kunstmuseum, Dusseldorf, Germany; Biblioteca Marciana, Correr, and Fondazione Cini, Venice, Italy; Biblioteca Herziana, Rome, Italy; and Courtauld Institute, Warburg Institute, the University of London, England.

In addition to dissertation research, Green has published and presented papers about the American/German painter Albert Bloch. Included here are the beginning sections of Green's latest article about Bloch entitled "Albert Bloch. His Early Career: Munich and Der Blaue Reiter" published in the German journal Pantheon.

Richard Green is one of many exemplary members of faculties within Alabama's junior/community college system. Having come to Calhoun in 1966 from New Mexico State University where he earned his Master of Arts in Art, Green subsequently earned an M.A. in History of Art from the University of Kansas. Green, married to Lucile Clouser and the father of one daughter, Anna, is an active member of the Decatur community, having served as President of the Decatur Art Guild, Vice President of the Decatur Arts Council, and cellist in the Huntsville Symphony Orchestra.

Albert Bloch

His Early Career: Munich and Der Blaue Reiter

Richard C. Green

Of those American artists who worked in Germany in the first decades of the twentieth century, Albert Bloch remains one of the least known. This is true even though he participated in exhibits that figure prominently in the history of modern art: Der Blaue Reiter, Erster Deutscher Herbstsalon, and the international Sonderbund, as well as many one-man and joint exhibitions, some sponsored by Der Sturm in Berlin and elsewhere. It is notable that Bloch was the only American to exhibit in the two shows of Der Blaue Reiter organized by his friends Franz Marc and Wassily Kandinsky in Munich in 1911 and 1912.

Bloch has not been totally eclipsed, for his work can be found in major American museums – the Whitney Museum in New York, the Art Institute of Chicago, and the Museum of Modern Art in New York, as well as in several regional and university collections – and in Munich at the Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus, but his name seldom appears in accounts of early modern painting, even those dealing directly with developments in Germany. The responsibility for this state of semi-obscurity must rest largely with the artist himself. After his return to live in the United States in 1921, when he was acclaimed with a flurry of attention as a modernist, he deliberately avoided the art market place, finding a new career as a professor of painting and drawing in the comparative isolation of a midwestern university. From then until the end of his career, he refused to push his work before the public. Within a few years he had disappeared from the public eye. At his death in 1961, he was remembered chiefly by former students and a few ardent collectors.

3 Albert Bloch, Die drei Pierrots Nr. 2, 1911, oil on canvas, 65 x 50 cm.
Lawrence, Kansas, collection of Anna Francis Bloch.

A comprehensive view of Bloch's life work, much of it still assembled in his studio, reveals that he followed his European phase with ever-deepening maturity as his painting became more visionary and personal. The expectations raised by his work of those earlier years were fulfilled in the richness of thought and depth of feeling that permeated his later painting. Devoting himself to finding his own way, he left behind his earlier concerns with stylistic approaches. His later painting, although it owed much to the earlier work and, in fact, grew out of it, became more perfectly attuned to Bloch's tendency to paint intensely private visions in which time, the phenomenal world and the spiritual world interact in a mystical union. How different this later work would have been without the experience of twelve years in Germany it is impossible to know. But as Klaus Lankheit has concluded: "One thing is certain: it would be unjust to tie Bloch to the Munich. . . ."

PAULA SUE HAYES PRESENTS PAPER AT WASHINGTON MEETING

Paula Sue Hayes, new English instructor, Shelton State Junior College

Paula Sue Hayes, a recent addition to the English faculty at Shelton State Junior College, has devoted the majority of the past three years to research and writing concerning adult women becoming college students--the practicalities of their lives which have impelled them toward a return to college and their curriculum needs.

Ms. Hayes has much experience in teaching English. She has taught in such diverse institutions as Savannah State College, The University of Alabama, Tuskegee Institute and high schools in Alabama and Florida. During 1979 she was named Pre-doctoral Scholar in Project Growth at The University of Alabama at which time she began to pursue her doctorate in Curriculum Development, American Studies, and Women's Studies. Project Growth, a fellowship program jointly sponsored through the Institute of Higher Education Research and Services, UA, and the National Institute of Education, was designed to give women and minorities opportunities to develop research and leadership skills. During her tenure as Pre-doctoral Scholar, Ms. Hayes studied with Dr. Arthur Chickering, imminent researcher in adult development theory at Memphis State University. As a result of her research, she has presented papers concerning returning adult women students to national conferences, the most recent being the Women and Research Conference, American Educational Research Association, October 1981, in Washington, D. C. Ms. Hayes' paper focused upon the development of External Degree Contracts for Humanities' credits for returning women students.

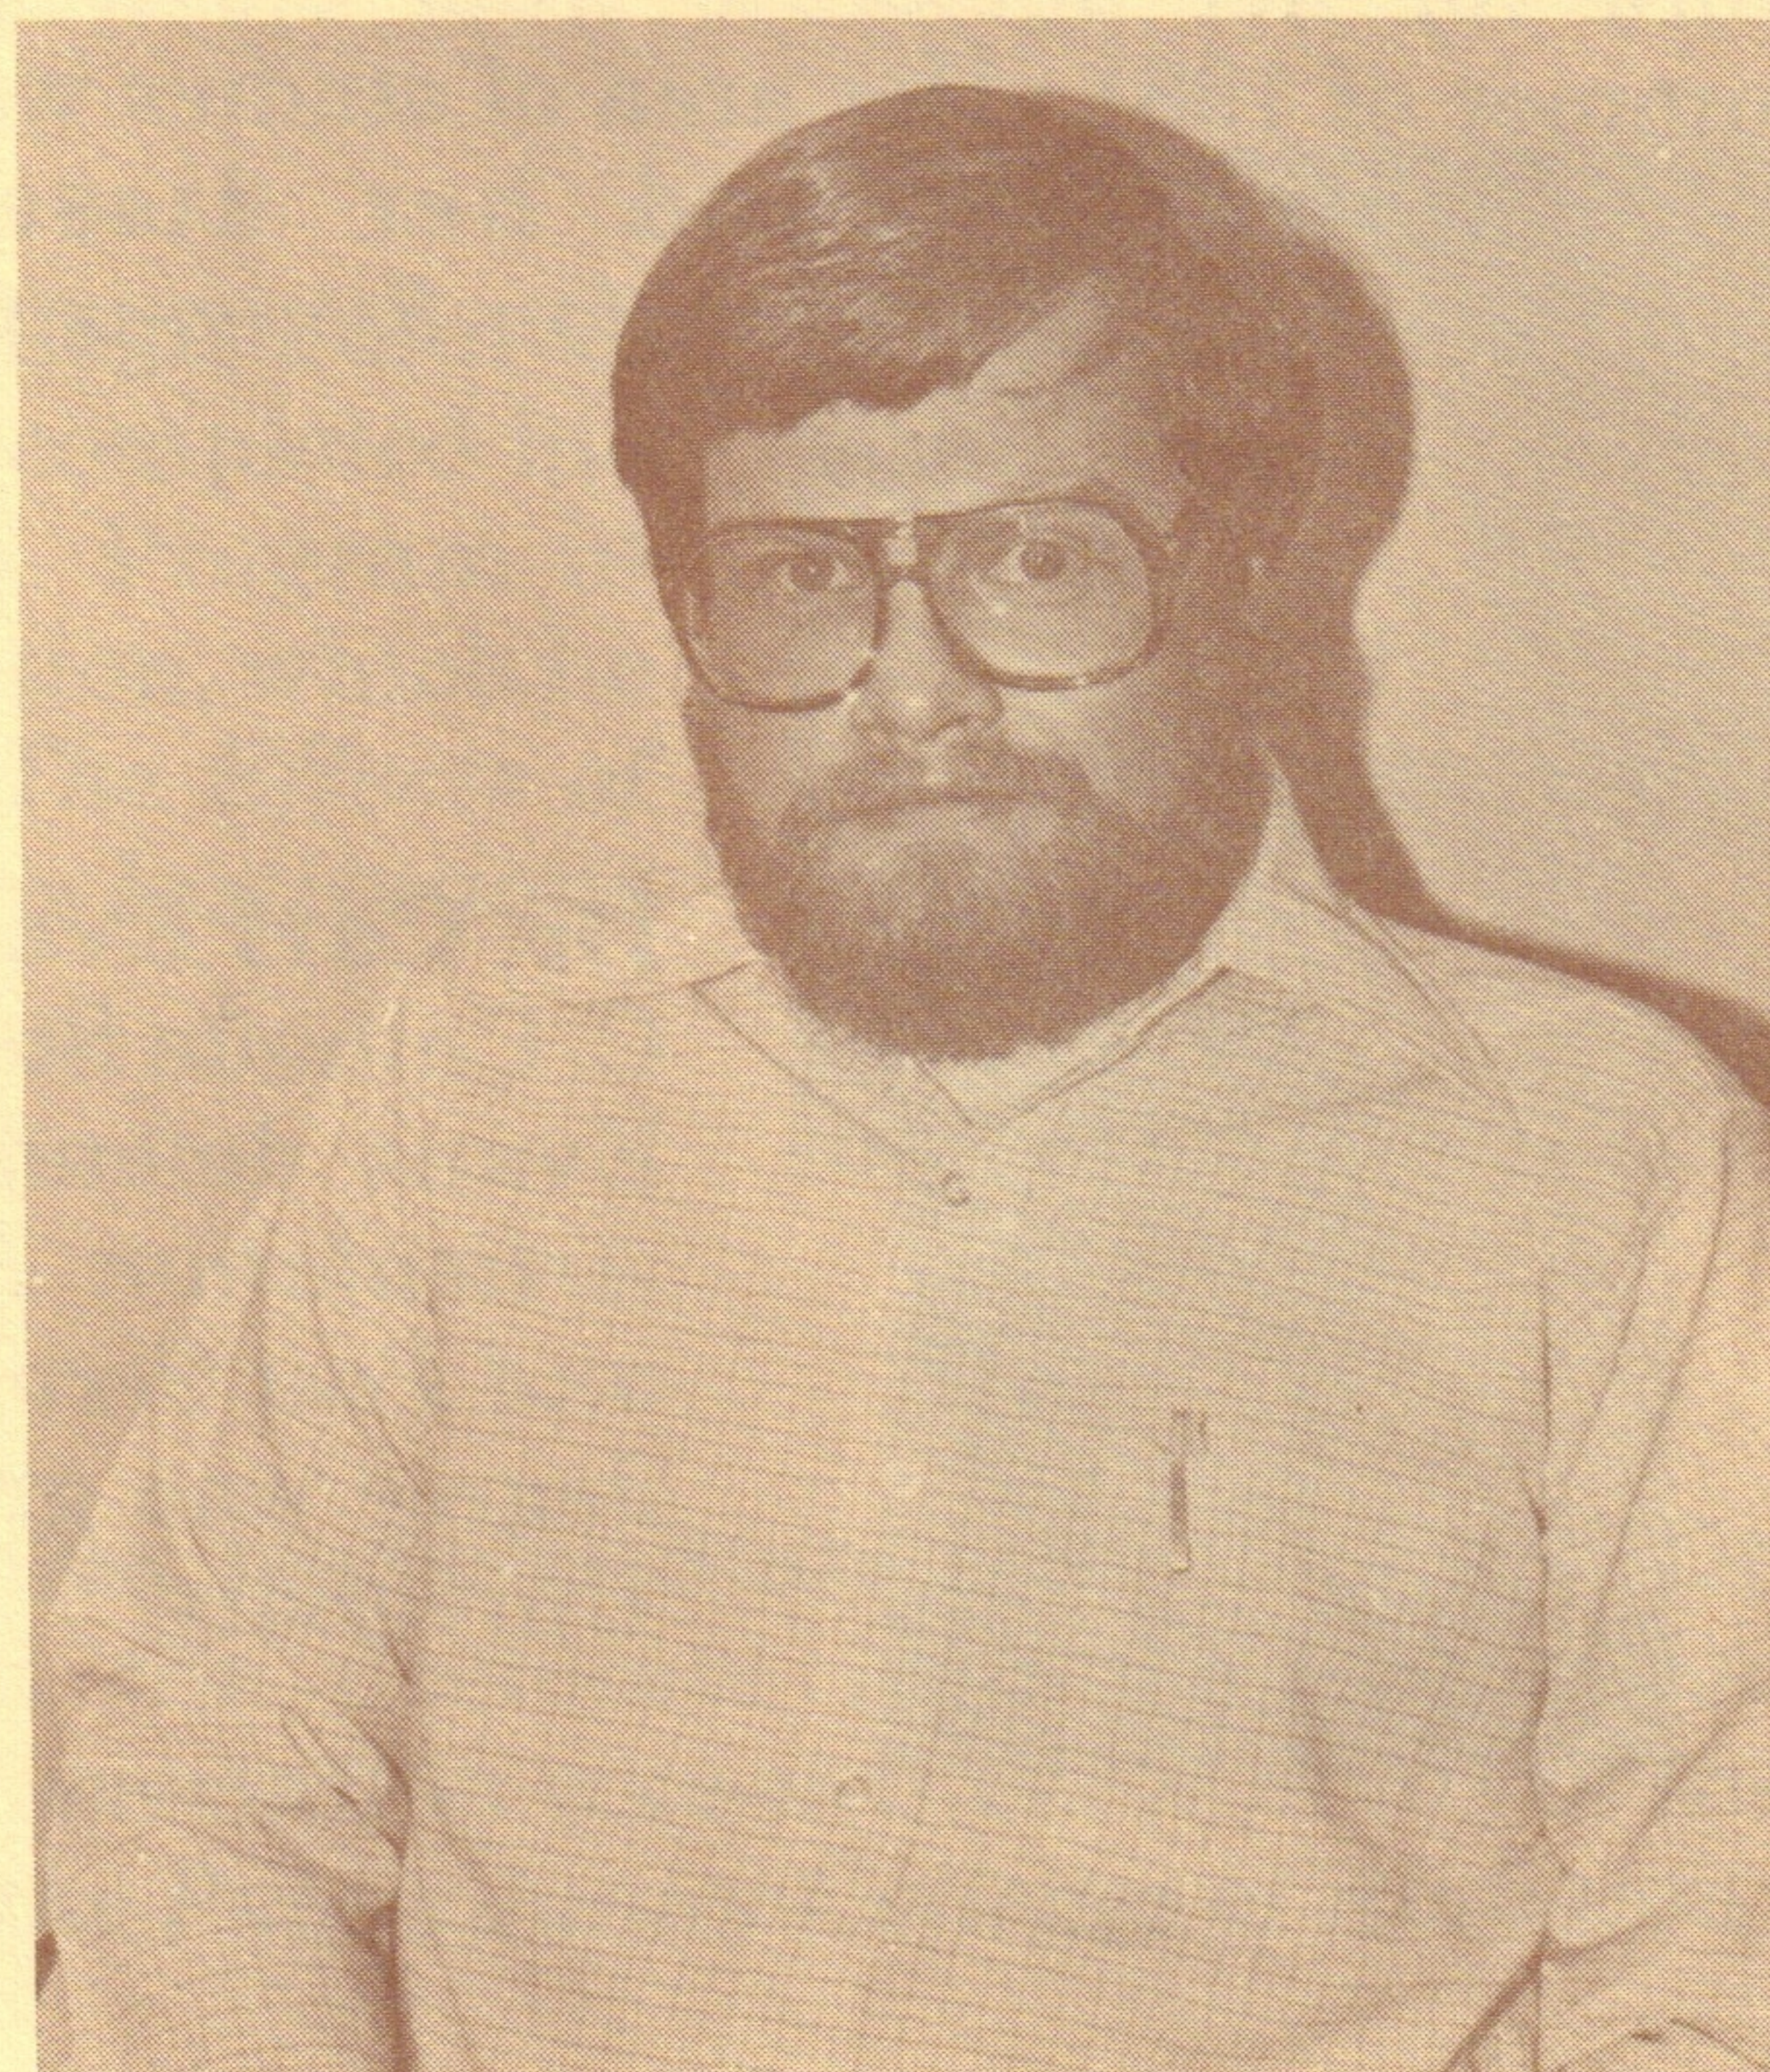

Currently, Ms. Hayes is completing her dissertation research, gathering data describing 250 undergraduate women students in Alabama's colleges and universities who are over the age of 25. Through the information generated, she hopes to add to the growing literature describing adult life stages and the curriculum needs of adult female students.

Cooper Directs National Science Foundation Grant at Shelton State

Shelton State Junior College has been awarded a $15,000 grant by the National Science Foundation under the Instructional Scientific Equipment Program. This program is designed to strengthen classroom, laboratory, and field work experience for undergraduate students by exposing them to current laboratory instrumentation and educational technology.

Wade Cooper, professor of Biology at Shelton State Junior College, was the Project Director. Cooper received his graduate degree from The University of Alabama. He was assisted in writing the grant by two other Shelton professors, Margie Mantel Moore and Rosemary Galin.

The award was one of 235 selected from 1,399 proposals from public and private universities, four year, and two-year colleges from across the United States.

AJCCA Members Receive Doctorates

Yearly, numerous AJCCA faculty and administrators complete graduate studies and are awarded doctorates. The years of study and dedication speak well about the seriousness of purpose of Alabama's junior/community college professionals. We salute these recent graduates.

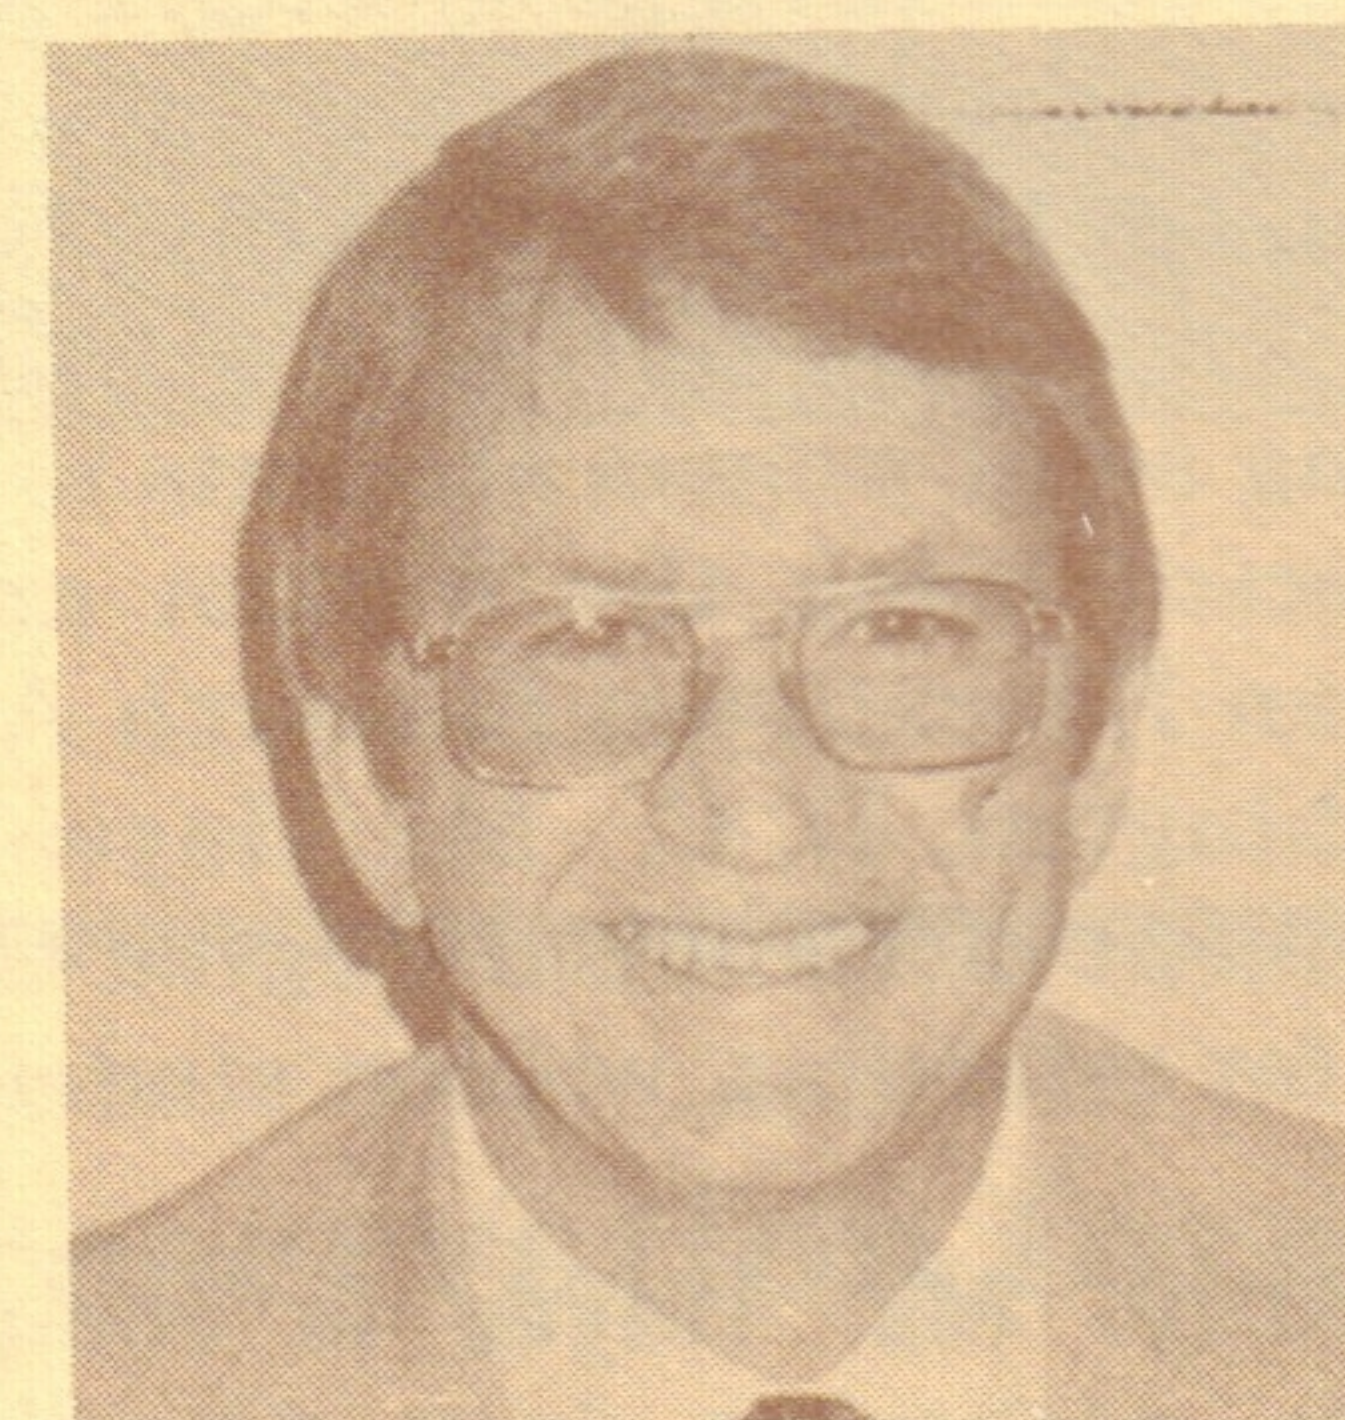

Dr. Helen Cook Austin, Art Instructor and Director of the Art Gallery, John C. Calhoun State Community College. Dr. Austin completed work for her Ph.D. in Administration/Higher Education at The University of Alabama, Fall 1981. Her dissertation was entitled Articulation of Art Courses for Transfer Students in Alabama Universities.

Dr. Lora Conrad, Director of Development and Computer Services, Northwest Junior College. Dr. Conrad completed her work for her doctorate from Nova University during the summer of 1981. Her area of studies was Community College Administration, and her dissertation concerned Computerbased Information Systems in Small Colleges.

Dr. Carl Evans, Director of Admissions and Registrar, John C. Calhoun State Community College. During the fall 1981, Dr. Evans defended his dissertation entitled A Survey of the Articulation Efforts Between the Public Secondary Schools and Post Secondary Occupational Programs in Alabama. His degree was granted in Educational Leadership from Auburn University.

Dr. Tommy M. Guthrie, Dean of the College, Enterprise State Junior College. Dr. Guthrie received his doctorate from Mississippi State University during the summer of 1981. The title of his dissertation was A Study of the Recruitment, Admissions, and Services Offered Non-traditional Students by Rural Junior Colleges in the Southeast.

Dr. Sandra Kirby Martin, Assistant to the President, John C. Calhoun State Community College. Dr. Martin defended her dissertation during September 1981 at The University of Alabama. Her Ph.D. was granted within the Area of Educational Leadership, and her dissertation was entitled Community College Program Development through Community Service.

Dr. Beatrice Morse, Department Chairperson, Education, S. D. Bishop State Junior College. Dr. Morse graduated during the Summer 1981 from The University of Alabama. Her dissertation study was entitled Variables Related to Success in Emergency School Aid Act Learning Centers. Dr. Morse was a part of Project Growth, a fellowship program developed to encourage research productivity among minorities and women, sponsored jointly through the Institute of Higher Education Research and Services, UA, and the National Institute of Education.

Dr. Robert Searcy, Associate Dean of the College, John C. Calhoun State Community College. Dr. Searcy completed his graduate work at The University of Alabama, Program in Higher Education/Administration. His dissertation, which he defended successfully in November 1981, was The Effects of Proration on Alabama's Two-Year Postsecondary Institutions as Perceived by Chief Executive Officers.

Dr. Jesse Walker, Division Chairperson, Business, Gadsden State Junior College. Dr. Walker completed his graduate work toward the doctorate in the Educational Leadership Program, Auburn University. His dissertation was entitled A Study of the Role of the Chairman of the Business Division in the Public Junior Colleges of Alabama.

CANFIELD NAMED WALLACE DEAN

Carole C. Canfield

Carole C. Canfield has been named Dean of Instruction, College Division, Wallace State Community College in Selma, according to an announcement by Charles L. Byrd, President of the Community College.

Dean Canfield has been acting Dean of Instruction since July 1980. She earned her Bachelor's and Master's Degrees from Auburn University and Auburn University at Montgomery and is a doctoral candidate at Auburn University studying Vocational and Adult Education. Prior to her employment at Wallace State, Dean Canfield has been a vocational instructor in Atlanta, Georgia; Supervisor of Instruction, Birmingham Metropolitan Area Skills Center; Supervisor of Training and Skills Center, Montgomery Area Skills Center.

The membership of AJCCA congratulates Carole C. Canfield on her appointment as Dean of Instruction.

Director of Student Services Appointed at Northwest Junior College

Northwest Junior College President Charlie Britnell recently announced the appointment of Sharon Williams as Director of Student Services. She has been employed at Northwest for the past three years as counselor. She holds the B.S., M.A., and Ed.S. Degrees in Counseling and Guidance from The University of Alabama. As Director, she will initiate an Office of Student Services with the purpose of aiding the total development of each student at Northwest.

Dr. Joseph D. Talmadge

NEW PRESIDENT AT ENTERPRISE

The Alabama State Board of Education selected Dr. Joseph D. Talmadge, former academic dean, as the new President of Enterprise State Junior College. Having been an administrator at ESJC since its inception in 1965, Dr. Talmadge earned his B.A. Degree in 1958, his M.A. in 1959 (both degrees from Vanderbilt University), and his doctorate in educational administration at Auburn University in 1976.

Dr. Talmadge was appointed as a representative on the Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools in 1978 and now is serving his second three-year term. He has served on numerous college accrediting teams and on two major committees for SACS since 1970. A member of Phi Delta Kappa educational fraternity, Talmadge is also active in the Enterprise Rotary Club, the Coffee County Arts Alliance, and is a deacon at Enterprise First Baptist Church. Married to the former Phyllis Wilkes, President Talmadge is the father of three children, Vicki, Keith, and Dan.

AJCCA salutes Dr. Talmadge on his recent appointment as President of ESJC. His service to the junior college system in Alabama is commendable.

CAMPUS NEWS AND NOTES

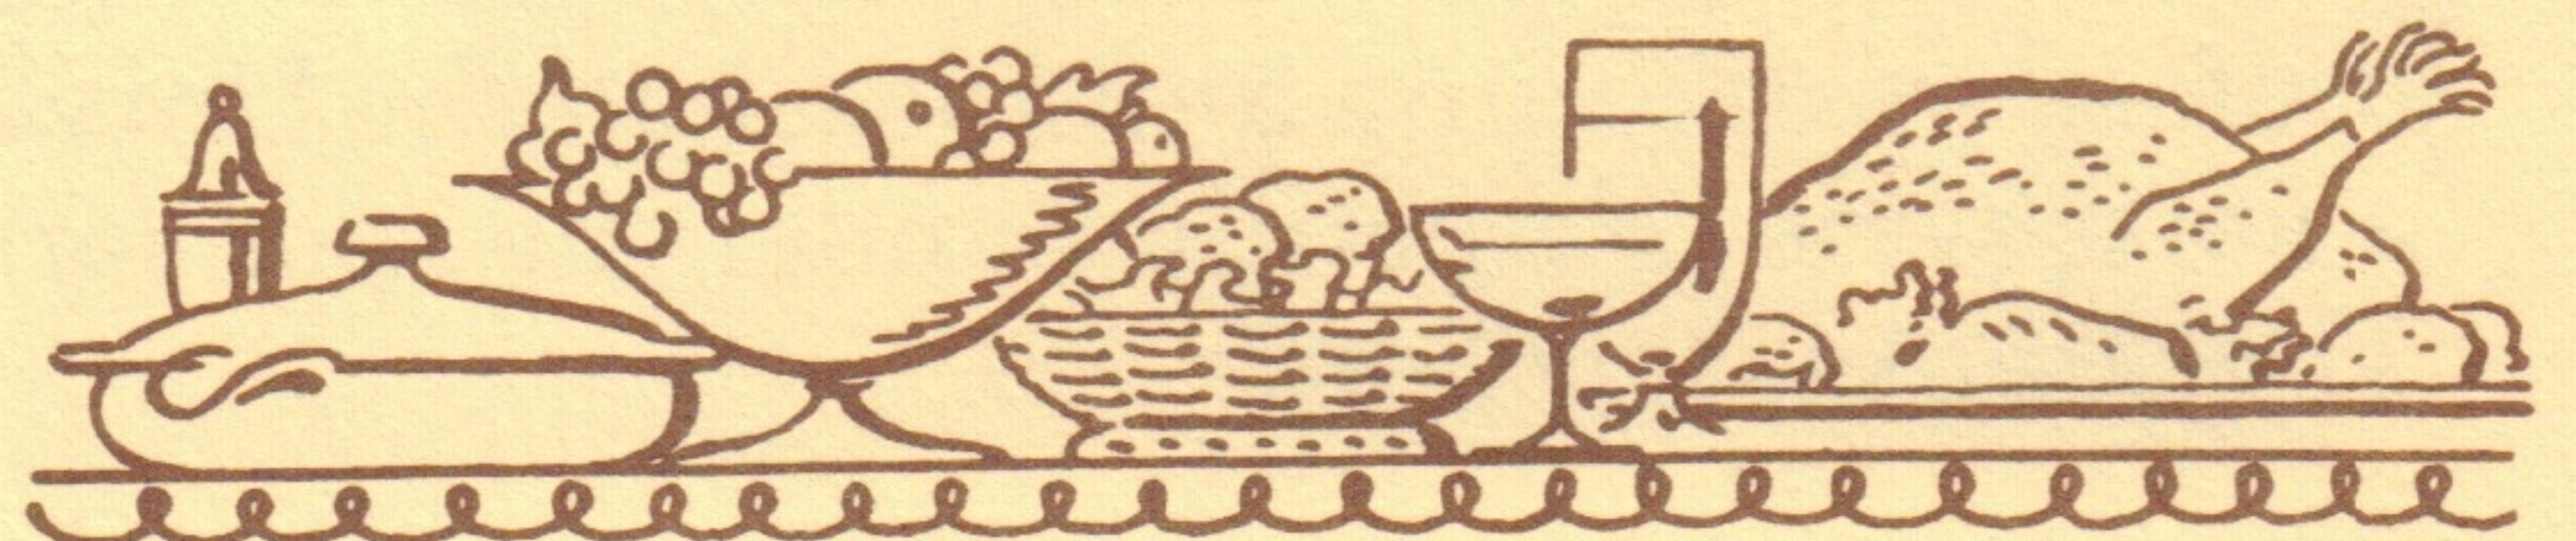

Sieberts Honored at Faulkner State

During October, an Appreciation Day for Dr. and Mrs. Lathem N. Siebert of Bay Minette was sponsored by the North Baldwin Chamber of Commerce and Faulkner State Junior College. Dr. Siebert is the retiring President of FSJC, and Mrs. Sibert is the Director of Financial Aid.

The Sieberts received several special presentations during a program held in their honor. Making presentations were the Honorable L. T. Rhodes, Jr., Mayor of Bay Minette; Dr. Dennis Goodwin, Director of the Troy State University Bay Minette Branch; and the Faulkner State faculty and staff. Keynote speaker was long-time friend of the Siberts and former governor, George C. Wallace. Also delivering special remarks were Isabelle Thomasson, Ron Creel, Dr. Wayne Teague, and James H. Faulkner, prominent businessman and elected official for whom the college is named.

Dr. Sibert was born in Dekalb County. In 1948 he received his B.S. Degree from Jacksonville State University and began teaching in Barbour County. He then received the M.A. Degree and the Ed.D. Degree from Auburn University. In 1965 while serving as Associate Professor of Education at Birmingham Southern College, he was appointed by the State Board of Education as President of Faulkner State.

Mrs. Siebert, the former Ann Price of Clio, received her B.S. Degree from Jacksonville State University and the M.Ed. from Auburn University. The Siberts have two children, Ned and Mary Ann.

WALLACE STATE IN SELMA HOSTS TRUMBAUER FESTIVAL

The English Department at Wallace State Community College in Selma hosted the Trumbauer Theatre and Speech Communication Festival (District VI). This festival included two events: a workshop and a competition. The workshop was held on campus October 3rd, and senior high students from the surrounding area came to learn about the dramatic and speech competition on campus, November 23rd. At the workshop, these students saw demonstrations by their colleagues in duet acting, poetry interpretation, and original oratory. The guests speaker was Mr. Newton Neely, Assistant Professor of Drama at the University of Montevallo. Professor Neely spoke informally and demonstrated with help from the students the techniques of good acting. These students returned to campus to compete with one act plays and individual dramatic interpretations and speeches.

The Trambauer Festival originated in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Trambauer who were professors of drama and speech at the University of Montevallo. The Festival has evolved into a state-wide competition under the sponsorship of the Alabama Speech Communication and Theatre Association.

Colleges Use TV To Teach Courses

By Amy Herring and Joe Simmons,
Advertiser Staff Writers

(The following article appeared in the Enterprise Advertiser-Journal "Local Focus" section on September 27-October 3, 1981. Reprinted with permission of the Advertiser.)

Work, family responsibilities, poor health and advanced age are no longer valid excuses for failing to receive a college education.

Thanks to Public Television stations and a group of educators, students may earn college credits while sitting at home watching television.

Television courses are now offered at five colleges and junior colleges throughout the state and more may join the program, said Henry Bonner, program director for Alabama Educational Television.

"They are previously produced courses designed for television... and PBS has now bought the rights," said Bonner.

Produced by colleges in Texas, Florida and California, each class will be televised for one hour each Saturday and Sunday afternoon for 15 weeks, Bonner said. The program began Sept. 12 and runs through Dec. 23, he said.

The tests are administered on campus by resident professors, but all other work can be done at home. The classes also require text books and study guides and carry five hours of credit.

Three such classes are part of Enterprise State Junior College's fall curriculum.

Dr. David Chalker said the school has been "very pleased" with student response.

"All of the classes we are offering can be used in almost anybody's curriculum," Chalker said. "Ninety students have already signed up for the three courses, and we think that's real good for a new program."

Chalker said ESJC will offer the television classes to give students "an opportunity because some people with other jobs just can't come on campus."

Because Enterprise is near Fort Rucker, a U.S. Army post, Chalker said, the college geared its efforts toward military personnel. He added that more than 25 percent of the enrollment in a class he oversees is connected with the military.

Classes offered by ESJC include: "It's Everybody's Business," an introductory-level business course; "Understanding Human Behavior," an introductory psychology course; and "American Government Survey," a basic history course.

"This is going to be new to most students. Probably 100 percent of them have never taken a course like this before," Chalker said. "We plan to evaluate the students and the classes after this quarter."

Bonner said several more courses are available which may be broadcast winter quarter.

If the classes get high marks and the courses being offered to colleges next quarter are applicable to ESJC's curriculum, Chalker said the school will offer television courses during winter quarter.

The ESJC classes will be shown on Channel 2 on Saturday and Sunday afternoons, according to Chalker.

Auburn University plans to offer government and psychology courses through the Office of Continuing Education but has no enrollment figures because notice of the classees has only recently been mailed, a spokesman said.

Auburn has never offered credit courses via television.

"This is a new opportunity for students to enroll in college courses and receive college credit without attending on-campus classes," said Sarah Rondeau, independent study program supervisor.

Classes will be broadcast on Channel 3, cable television, she said.

Other schools using the programs are Jefferson State Junior College in Birmingham, the University of Alabama in Birmingham, Calhoun Community College in Decatur and Shelton State Junior College in Tuscaloosa, said Bonner.

Snead State Offers Data Processing

In order to keep pace with the demand for trained computer operators, Snead State Junior College in Boaz is offering a new program. Data Processing is the newest series of courses to be added to the school's curriculum. A student may now receive an Associate in Science Degree in Data Processing from Snead in two academic years.

The program is designed for the student who wishes to begin work in the computer operations field after two years of formal training. Students from North Alabama are taking advantage of the new program at Snead.

Hazel Hacker Is New CPS

Mrs. Hazel Hacker, a resident of Hartselle and an employee of Calhoun State Community College, has attained the Certified Professional Secretary (CPS) rating. CPS is a rating offered by Professional Secretaries International for those who successfully complete a two-day, six-part examination administered annually in May. The exams cover such topics as economics, business organization, accounting and business law, office management and supervision, transcription and composition skills as well as human relations principles. Mrs. Hacker is employed in Calhoun's Division of Health Sciences.

NATIONAL YOUTH SPORTS PROGRAM AT LAWSON STATE

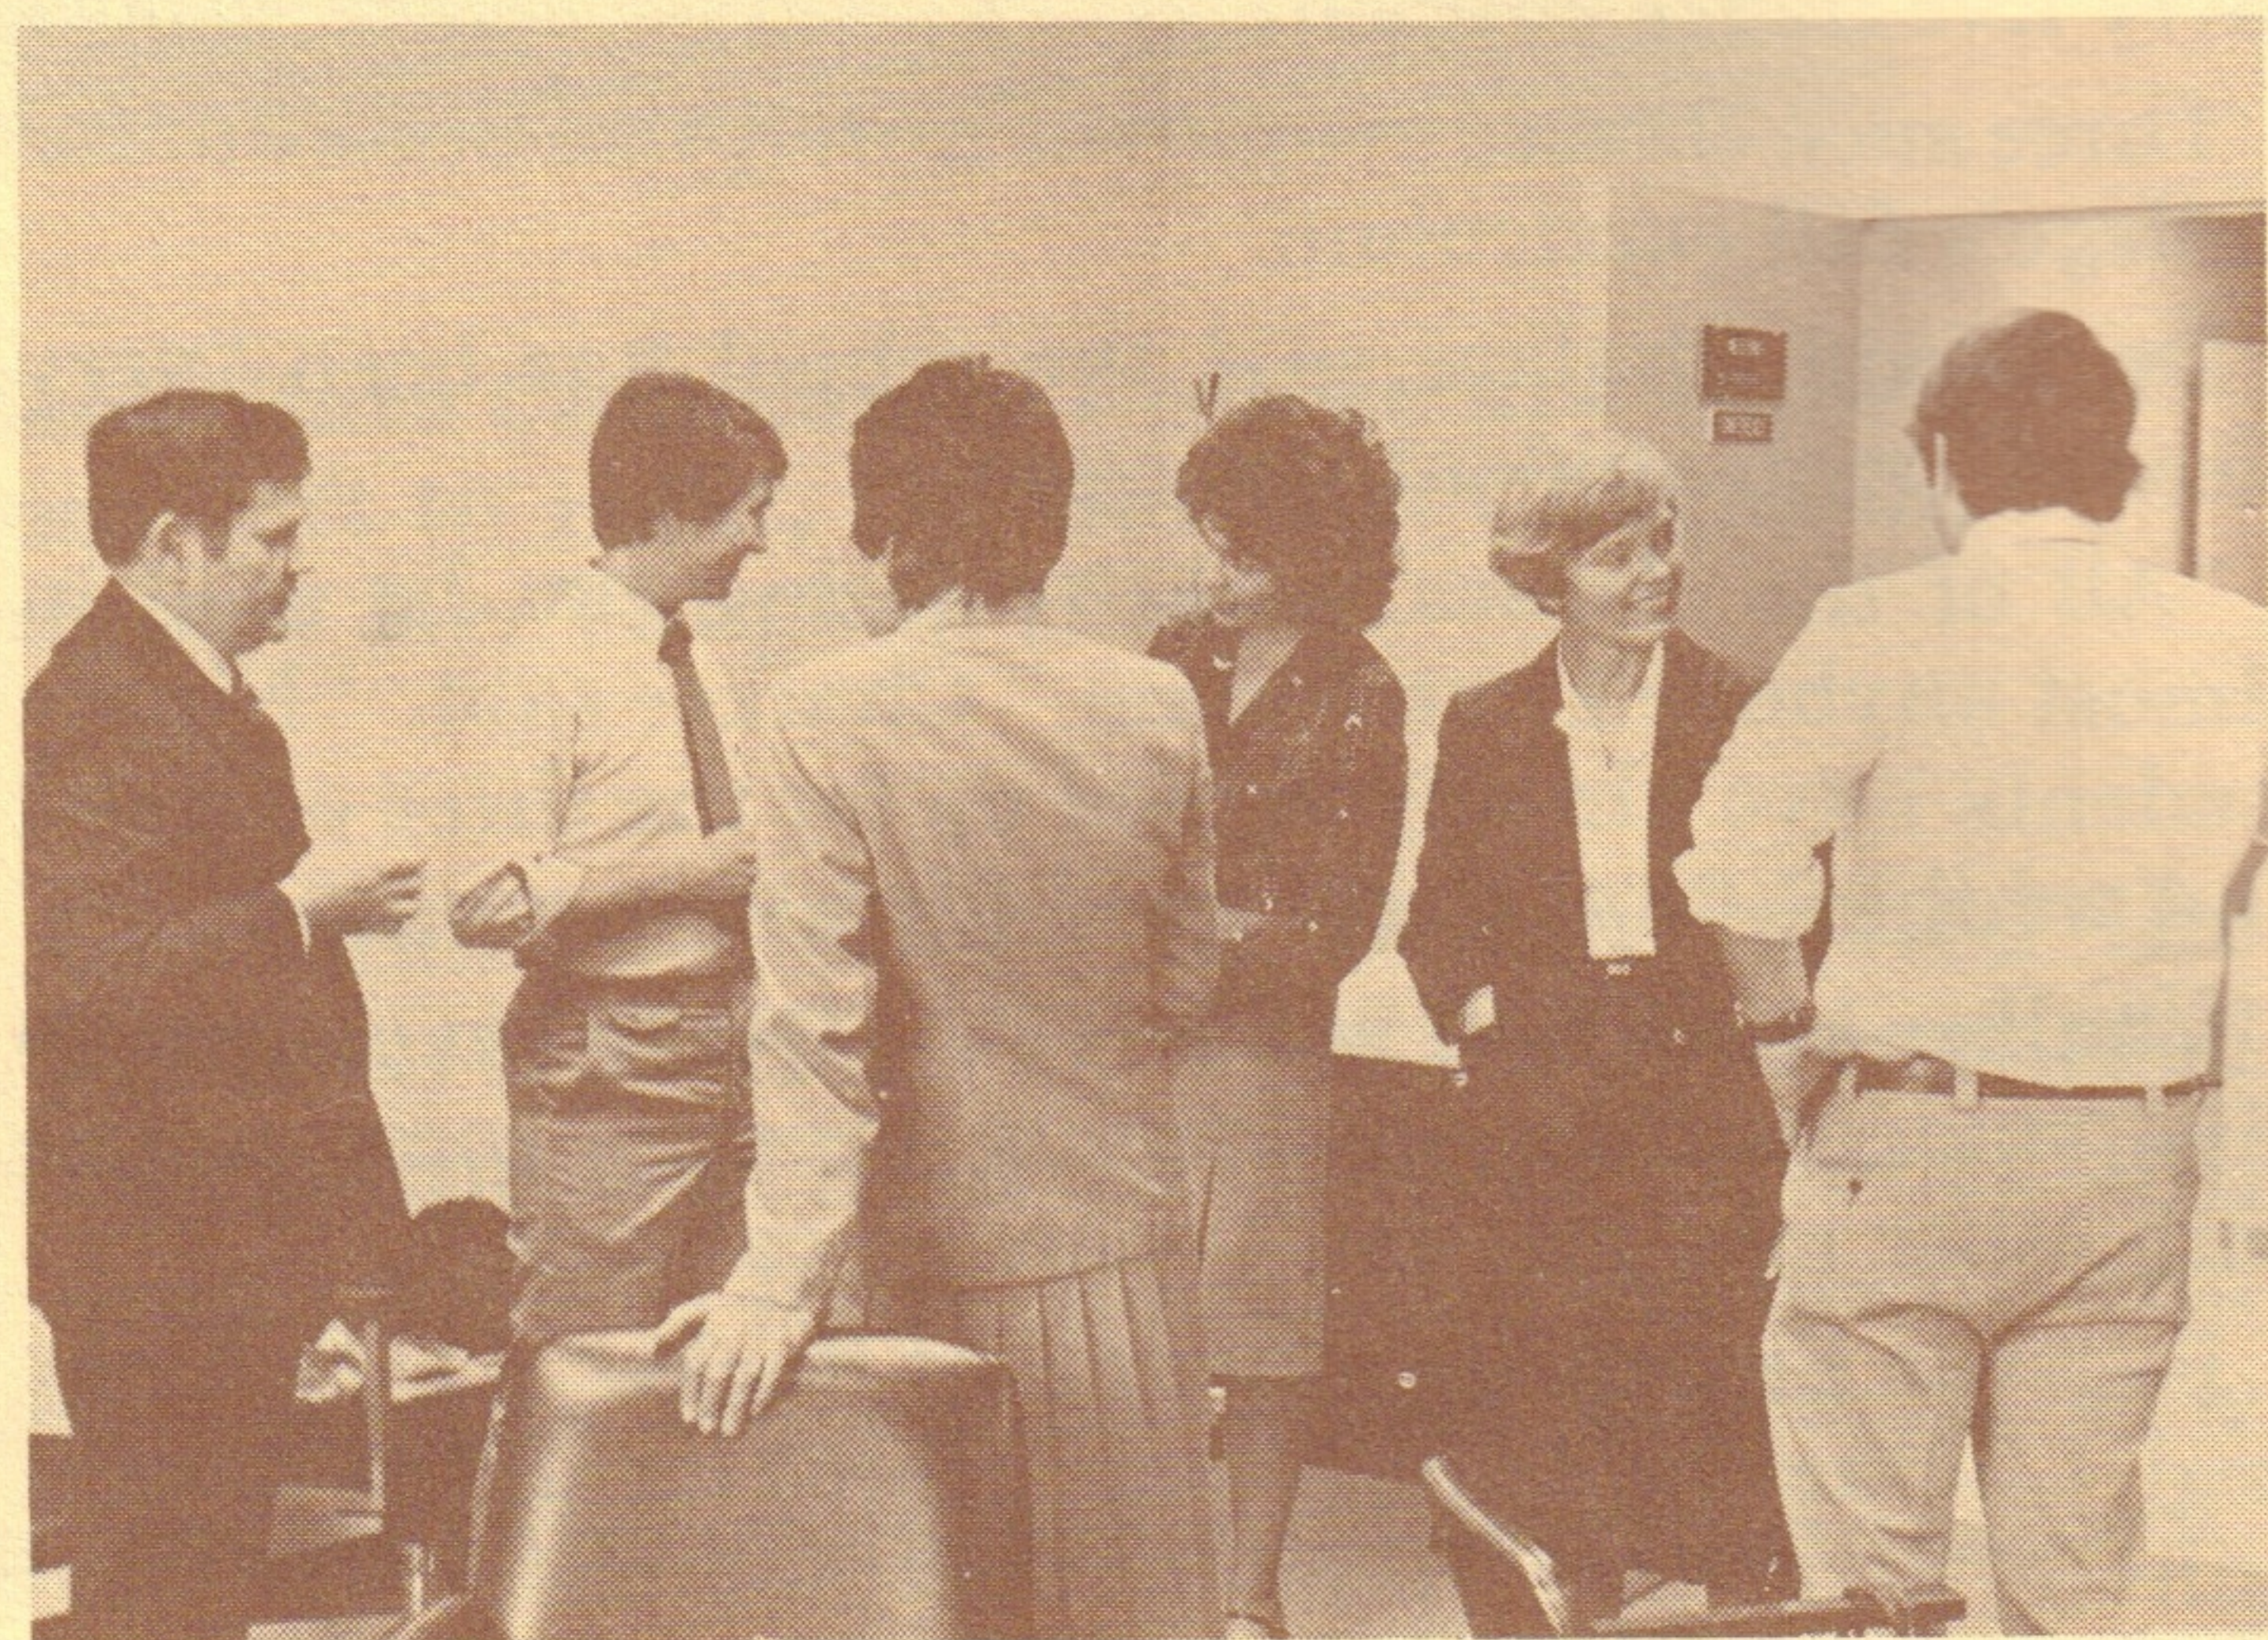

Lawson State Community College was a participant in the 1981 National Youth Sports Program conducted by selected institutions under the sponsorship of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Community Services Administration. The NYSP makes available to many American youth supervised sports training and competition which they might otherwise be unable to experience. Program participants acquire physical skills and health knowledge, improve their physical fitness, and become acquainted with career and educational opportunities. Mr. E. O. Turner, Head Coach at Lawson State, was the Project Director.

Fund Raising Is Topic Of CARD Workshop

On October 16th, a workshop on Private Fund Development for CARD members was held on the campus of Jefferson State Junior College in Birmingham. The workshop was sponsored by Bishop State Junior College of Mobile.

CARD, Council for Alabama Resource Development, was formed by junior college development officers to promote professional development and increase the capacity to acquire and manage extra-institutional resources. During the workshop, national consultants presented sessions on planning and implementing support from the private sector.

Calhoun Community College in Decatur held its first annual Walkathon to raise funds for the Calhoun Foundation, a support group of interested community persons, faculty, staff, and students. Over $16,000 was collected for use by the Foundation in order to provide Calhoun scholarships, complete campus beautification projects, sponsor faculty development projects, and enhance the ability of Calhoun to meet the needs of its students. Shown below are some of the more than 500 marchers in the three-mile walk.

JEFFERSON STATE STUDENTS RETURN FROM INTERNATIONAL TOUR

Under the direction of Virginia Latta, 50 high school students from the Birmingham area along with college students from Samford and Jefferson State toured cities in England, France, Italy and Switzerland for a month during the summer of 1981. In this program, participating students attend JSJC in the spring in order to study art and history courses in preparation for the summer trip. Upon return, completion of a workbook/review is required, and credit is given for course work.

Jefferson State and the American Institute for Foreign Study combine efforts in the project. AIFS uses professional tour guides and international faculty to instruct on the tour. Course work completed through this program receives credit at Jefferson State and is accepted for transfer to other colleges and universities.

"CONNER DAY" AT SHELTON STATE

Former Shelton student Rosalind Conner, winner of the 1981 Miss Shelton State Pageant and the school's representative to the 1981 Miss Alabama Pageant, returned to the college recently for a reception in her honor. Conner was selected from a group of women from around the country last summer by Ebony magazine as a model and a member of the Ebony Fashion Fair. Currently, she is touring with the group in cities across the United States.

JEFFERSON STATE STUDENT RECEIVES SCHOLARSHIP

The National Secretary Association of Birmingham recently awarded a $500 scholarship to an area student. Laura Lynn Adcock, a second-year student at Jefferson State, is a secretarial science major and part-time employee of Rives Peterson Attorneys. Daughter of H. L. Adcock of Center Point, Laura is a 1980 graduate of Erwin High School. While at Erwin, Laura was a member of the FBLA for three years. In 1980 she was named Best COE Student as well as being a member of "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

Mrs. Jo Ann Como, member of the National Secretary Association, presents a $500 scholarship check to Laura Lynn Adcock of Center Point. Laura, a second-year student at Jefferson State Junior College, is majoring in Secretarial Science.
